

Hijackings 1970-2001

Information taken from Statements by Mary Schiavo to the 9/11 National Commission on Terrorist Attacks

“Terrorism against aviation is not an unknown, unforeseeable risk. Quite the contrary. The risk of airlines being subject to terrorist attack – whether by a disgruntled employee or a murderous foreign faction set on launching a jihad or making a political statement – is a risk that is well known and real. Such attacks have happened hundreds of times in the past, 823 times from 1970 to 2001 to be exact. The risk of hijacking and terrorist attack is so prevalent and such a known risk that airlines have terrorism and hijack insurance. It is also because aviation has been repeatedly attacked by terrorists and other criminals, that we have laws, regulations and requirements for aviation security.”

“Astonishingly, we heard, even from the FAA and the Department of Transportation that ‘nothing like this ever happened before.’ In an effort to help this nation and its leaders have a longer memory, I have prepared some charts summarizing some of my firm’s recent research. Here are the facts about what exactly has happened before.”
